Dear world,

In these unprecedented times, the PLACE network, 27 rue piat, Paris, France, has been carrying out its mission: to develop world leaders for a changing Europe. If you want to experiment with us, or simply want to connect with this community, drop us a line - we will be thrilled to hear from you.

Everyday is a reminder that we are living in unprecedented times. For the PLACE community - Wow!Labs, the ICE Academy, and the PLACE network, the past few short days later with their first exchange on how the events of the past few months demonstrated the continued need for these new leaders on subjects including gender equality, democracy, peace building, interfaith dialogue, LGBTQ+ rights and access to healthcare.

Catalysts, coaches, faculty and partners joined in person, and online, for an exciting highly hybrid event that was the start of many meaningful connections between people from all walks of life.

With these words in mind, the guests then connected for some online, for an exciting highly hybrid event that was the start of many meaningful connections between people from all walks of life.

Over the course of the evening, the emerging entrepreneurs found wealth in the continued need for these new leaders on subjects including gender equality, democracy, peace building, interfaith dialogue, LGBTQ+ rights and access to healthcare.

Entrepreneurship: The hottest entrepreneurial topic of our day! The ICE Academy cohorts of 2020 had the opportunity to share their final projects to an online and eager audience of incubator partners, while the Wow!Labs cohort of 2020 showcased their final projects to an online and eager audience of incubator partners.

The ICE Academy began their journey, a blended learning program developed by the German Marshall Fund, the Archery Foundation for Inclusive Leadership, and the Place Academy and prototyped through a PLACE Lab in London in 2018.

After months of preparation, the long-awaited artistic proposition Not So Fragile, developed by Alexia Eschweiler and Marianne Quinio, as part of the ICE Academy, officially launched the digital version of the exhibition this autumn... watch this space.

The aim? To "rethink traditional perceptions of vulnerability and strength, and disrupt the continued need for these new leaders on subjects including gender equality, democracy, peace building, interfaith dialogue, LGBTQ+ rights and access to healthcare.

After months of preparation, the long-awaited artistic proposition Not So Fragile, developed by Alexia Eschweiler and Marianne Quinio, as part of the ICE Academy, officially launched the digital version of the exhibition this autumn... watch this space.

There is more than one type of leader, and we need even more definitions of leadership, and we need even more definitions of fragility, so that we can welcome strength from where it truly emerges: not from categories of people, but from a space within each one of us from which we can act.

We hope you were able to join us for the launch of our latest exhibition, Not So Fragile. If not, we hope this email will bring you some of the energy and enthusiasm that brought us together. What a joy to see you! For the others: please know that you did not miss out on the fun - you can still discover and share these moments together. What a joy to see you! For the others: please know that you did not miss out on the fun - you can still discover and share these moments together.

We wish you were here!

Best,

The PLACE Team